THE SILVER SEIGNORAGE.

The seignorage on the bullion purchased by the government is estimated at about $54,000,000. This seignorage is the difference between the price paid by the Treasury department for the bullion and the coinage value of the bullion. It is the amount which would have gone into the pockets of miners instead of the Treasury vaults if the coinage of silver was free.

The expenditures of the government are in excess of the receipts, and the $54,000,000 seignorage would be very acceptable just now to help balance accounts, but the goldbug prejudice against silver is so deep-seated in the Treasury department that no silver dollars have been coined since last May, the profits from that source have ceased, and the result is apparent in the Treasury statements.

For some reasons very contradictory reports have been published regarding the coinage of the seignorage on silver. Soon after Congress adjourned it was announced that Secretary Carlisle had ordered the seignorage coined. Subsequently Secretary Carlisle visited New York and in an interview which was published in the gold press of that city, declared that he had not ordered the seignorage or any part of it coined, and that the mints would not coin silver. Now the Secretary is quoted as saying that he had no intention of tolling off the seignorage; and coining it, and in fact he is convinced that it can only be done by act of Congress.

Meantime the receipts of the Government for the first half of November are nearly $4,000,000 less than the expenditures. The dull times, caused in part at least by the suspension of silver coinage, and the low price of silver, are felt in the Treasury, but the goldbug remedy is to issue more bonds and let the stocks of silver bullion purchased under the Sherman act remain uncoined in the vaults.

In times of financial stringency it should be the duty of the Government to relieve the stringency by getting more money in circulation. If Congress had ordered all the silver bullion in the Treasury coined, and expended the coins in erecting public buildings, reclaiming desert lands and making other public improvements, the business depression would vanish, prices of products would advance, employment could be given to thousands now seeking work, and everybody, except the goldbugs, would be better satisfied. —Journal.

Harrison's Presentment.

Just two weeks ago the writer was one of a jovial party in Chicago whom Mayor Carter Harrison joined. "Boys," said Mayor Harrison during the conversation, "I must leave you as they are keeping me busy nowadays, so take one round with me, I have not got long to stay in this world, but while I am here I'll be on top and the world will know that Carter Harrison is alive and kicking. I don't expect to live much longer and the feeling grows upon me stronger every day that I will never die a natural death. I just feel sure that some crank has a divine call to butcher me in cold blood. But no matter, while I live I will do what I recognize as right and as my duty, and, whatever they may say of me, no one can say that Carter Harrison is not square in his dealings with his fellow-man or that he ever went back on a needy friend. So, boys, here's to you! You must excuse me as I have some work to attend to."

There were well known active Republicans as well as Democratic leaders in that little party, but one and all had a good word to say of the mayor after he had left the place. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Denver Times says that Gov. Waite has made up his mind to issue a call for a special session of the Legislature before Christmas. The continued low price of silver and consequent paralysis of the silver industry of the State are the reasons assigned for the call. Just what measure the Governor will recommend for aiding silver is not known.
